hares represent ownership in the company, as ach shareholder, is deemed owner. This type of shares, as referred to in the Company law, are equity shares or "ordinary shares". They are given this name, to distinguish them from other shares.

There are many types of shares, however, we will focus on "Equity Shares" and "Preference Shares". The holders of equity shares are the real owners of the company, and the number of shares held by them represents the portion of their ownership.

Equity shareholders have some privileges, such as getting voting rights at the general meetings, appointing or removing directors and auditors, getting profits and the more the profit, the more are dividends. This does not mean that they will get the whole profit of the year, but the residual profit, which remains after paying all expenses and liabilities.

On the other hand, preference shares, as the name indicates, gets precedence over equity shares on matters like distribution of dividends at a fixed rate and repayment of capital in the event of liquidation. The preference shareholders are deemed owners of the company like equity shareholders, however, they do not have voting rights except on matters which affect their rights like resolution or winding up of the company, or reduction of the capital. There are many types of preference shares, as participating on non-participating preference shares, convertible and non-convertible preference shares, cumulative and non-cumulative preference shares. Herein, there are variations. Comparing the two types, we could say, equity shares cannot be converted into preference shares, whereas, preference shares could be converted into equity shares. Equity shares are irredeemable and preference shares are redeemable. The major difference is the 'right to vote', as equity shares carry this right and preference shares do not, generally, carry such rights.

The rate of dividend is consistent for preference shares, while the rate of equity dividend depends on the amount of profit earned in the financial year and therefore it is changeable. Based on this. if anyone wants to invest in equity shares or preference shares, he can do. One thing to remember while investing is to purchase when the market is down and sell when the market is up. Another point, try to go for a long-term investment as it will give good returns in longer periods. The best form of investment in shares, could be mutual funds as the risk is comparatively less than individual stocks. Do not recklessly believe on any good advice, because some investments could give high returns, but they are the riskiest, so think twice before you opt to invest in stock market.

Better, contact a broker to help in purchasing securities listed on the Stock Exchange and buying from Secondary Market. It could be a little bit expensive as you pay brokerage charges. But brokers will help in opening accounts and completing the legal formalities. This, among others, could give more protection to

Lily Collins: The West End has always been my dream

Bang Showbiz | Los Angeles

ily Collins is fulfilling a "dream" by performing in London's West End.

The 35-year-old actress has made her stage debut in 'Barcelona' as Irene, an American tourist who has a one-night stand, and Lily has admitted that she's relishing the experience of performing in London.

The actress - who is the daughter of musician Phil Collins and his second wife, Jill Tavelman - told WhatsOnStage: "The West End has been my dream ... this originally had an offer for something in New York, a play, and I asked our writer if she could hold out and see if we can get it on the West End first, because my dream is the West End. She graciously said yes and now we're here."

Lily - who was born in England but raised in Los Angeles - still has fond memories of watching plays and musicals on Broadway.

However, she's loving the challenge of performing in the West End, explaining that she's "trying to seize the moment".

The actress - who is, perhaps, best known for her starring role in 'Emily in Paris' - shared: "I grew up seeing plays and musicals on Broadway, so ... honestly, the stage is just a whole medium that I have always wanted to be a part of.

"As a community, it's very specific - you either get the opportunity or you don't, and so I'm just going with the flow and trying to seize t h e m o ment. We'll see, but I'm just so foc u s e d on London, I love it here."

Debutant Bethell leads England to eight-wicket win over New Zealand

AFP | Christchurch

England blazed to an eight-wicket victory in the first Test against New Zealand vesterday, knocking off their 104-run target in just 12.4 overs of their second innings..

After bowling out New Zealand for 254 on day four in Christchurch, debutant Jacob Bethell scored the winning run to reach a maiden Test 50 off 37 deliveries with eight fours and a six. Joe Root was not out 23 off 15 balls at the other end.

"Very happy with the way we performed throughout the week," said England captain Ben Stokes after his side took a 1-0 lead in the three-Test series.

"Our bowlers were relentless throughout."

New Zealand resumed on 155-6 in their second innings, a lead of four runs, and frustrated England for more than two hours to reach 254, a lead of 103.

Darvl Mitchell, 31 overnight, scored a defiant 84 and put on a stubborn 13-over partnership for the last wicket worth 45 runs with Will O'Rourke (five not out). England's Brydon Carse took six second-innings wickets to finish with 10 in a Test for the first time.

The 104-run target was never going to be enough to stop England, who sealed the Test midway through the afternoon session.
