Andrew Garfield has no plans to play 'Spider-Man' again

ANI | Washington

Hollywood actor Andrew Garfield recently said that he has "no plans" to reprise his role as Peter Parker in future movies after months of denying his involvement in 'Spider-Man: No Way Home'.

Speaking to Variety on the red carpet of the SAG Awards 2022 on Sunday night, Garfield was asked if he was playing 'Spider-Man' again. The actor laughed and said, "No plans. That's the truth."

"Everyone's gonna call me a liar for the rest of my life. I'm the boy who cried wolf," the actor added.

Garfield was nominated at this year's SAG Awards for best male actor in a leading role for his musical turn in Lin-Manuel Miranda's 'Tick, Tick ... Boom! Miranda, who opened the show alongside fellow 'Hamilton' stars Leslie Odom Jr. and Daveed Diggs, recalled Garfield crying wolf when Miranda asked him on set in 2020 whether he was going to play Peter Parker.

"To his credit, he never said it to me," Miranda told Variety.

Miranda added, "He always denied it, but I was there the day it leaked. He was on my set in November when it leaked that he was in talks and I quietly went up to him and said, 'Bro, are you in the new 'Spider-Man?" and he went, 'Shut up, shut up.' It was the worst acting I'd ever seen him do. And I went, 'He's gotta practice that, that denial,' and he got very good at it, but I was there when he first workshopped
