ebanese authorities ☑have charged a man who opened fire on the US embassy in Beirut with the crime of belonging to the Islamic State group, a judicial source said yesterday.

Last month, a Syrian man was arrested for the shooting at the embassy entrance after having been seriously injured in the attack.

Farraj has yet to be interrogated because he is still in intensive care at the Beirut military hospital, recovering from serious injuries after being shot by the Lebanese army, the official said.

The assailant also possessed unlicensed weapons, said the official who requested anonymity because they are not allowed to speak to the press.

"Akiki also charged two other people with the crime of trafficking unlicensed weapons.
