Egypt denies claims of military role in Sudan

AFP | Cairo

Egypt has denied allegations from Sudanese paramilitary chief Mohamed Hamdan Daglo, at war with the army since April last year, that its military has been involved in the conflict.

The war between Daglo's Rapid Support Forces and the regular military, led by army chief Abdel Fattah al-Burhan, has killed tens of thousands and caused the world's largest displacement crisis.

In a video posted online Wednesday, Daglo accused Egypt's air force of carrying out strikes targeting his forces near Jebel Moya, a key area south of Khartoum.

Tornados, flooding leave 10 dead in hurricane's wake

AFP | Sarasota, US

t least 10 people were dead after Hurricane Milton smashed into Florida, US authorities said vesterday, after the monster weather system sent tornados spinning across the state and flooded swaths of the Tampa Bay area.

The major hurricane ripped across the state west to east before roaring into the Atlantic, leaving roads blocked by downed trees and powerlines in its wake. Some three million people are without power.

So far, though, it appears that tornadoes, rather than the floodwaters, have been responsible for the storm's deaths. Still, the southeastern US state was able to avoid the level of catastrophic devastation officials had feared.

ight extra pumps, a fleet of tankers, and teams of inspectors are on standby across the Capital Governorate as Bahrain prepares for a potentially tumultuous rainy season.

Drawing lessons from the severe flooding that wreaked havoc last April – particularly in Sanad, Nuwaidrat, and Sitra officials are introducing a new strategy to protect vulnerable communities from the threats posed by heavy rainfall.

The Capital Municipal Council held a session yesterday titled "Preparation for the Rainy Season," bringing together officials from the Ministry of Works and the Capital Municipality to discuss measures aimed at mitigating the impact of downpours.

This followed a similar meeting on 25 September that sought to review the preparations in place for the rain.

Engineer Saleh Tarrada, Chairman of the Capital Municipal Council, opened the meeting with a call for collaboration between various government departments and civil society.

The session covered a range of topics, including ongoing improvements to water drainage systems and the readiness of infrastructure for heavy rain.

Officials also reviewed operational plans aimed at tackling flooding and reducing water accumulation in key areas.

Ratan Tata

Indian mogul who built a global powerhouse M

AFP | Mumbai, India

ndustrialist Ratan Tata, who has died aged 86, was credited with transforming India's Tata Group into a globally renowned conglomerate with a portfolio ranging from software to sports cars.

A painfully shy student, he planned to be an architect and was working in the United States when his grandmother, who raised him, asked him to return home and join the sprawling family business.

He started out in 1962, staying in a hostel for apprentices and working on the shop floor near blast furnaces.

"It was terrible at that time but if I look back at it, it's been a very worthwhile experience because I have spent years handin-hand with the workers," he recounted in a rare interview.

Tata took over the family empire in 1991, riding the wave of the radical free-market reforms that the Indian government unleashed that year.

His 21 years in charge saw the salt-to-steel conglomerate expand its global footprint to include British luxury brands such as Jaguar and Land Rover.

His vaulted ambitions for the group, founded under British colonial rule, were not initially welcomed by older board members, he said, prompting him to institute a company retirement age policy.

Risk appetite

Born in Bombay, now Mumbai, in 1937, the Cornell Universitv-educated Tata was known for his willingness to take risks.

In 2004, he took the conglomerate's software outsourcing arm Tata Consultancy Services public at a time when many were nervous about investing in technology stocks.

That same year, he declared he wanted Tata Group to "spread its wings far beyond India" and become "at home in the world" buy up major brands, including Britain's Tetley Tea and Anglo-Dutch steel firm Corus.

Rio Tinto seals US$6.7 bn purchase of Arcadium Lithium

Sydney, Australia

Anglo-Australian mining giant Rio Tinto cemented a roughly US$6.7 billion deal to buy lithium chemicals producer Arcadium on Wednesday, snapping up a significant player in the redhot battery sector.

The bumper agreement values Arcadium -- which was only formed this year -- at US$5.85 a share, a premium of almost 40 percent over the market average.

"Against him, I have no other options, I have to play this well to beat him," 23-year-old Machac said.

He will now face world number one Jannik Sinner in the semi-finals.

Southgate taking year out from coaching

London, United Kingdom

Former England manager Gareth Southgate said Thursday he would not return to coaching for the next year.

Southgate resigned after England lost to Spain in the Euro 2024 final in July.

However the 54-year-old had been touted as a possible successor to Erik ten Hag as the Dutchman continues to struggle at Manchester United.

"I won't coach in the next year for sure, I'm certain of that," Southgate was quoted by the BBC as saying at the European Club Association general assembly in Athens.

The former Middlesbrough and England Under-21 manager has a close relationship with United's new sporting director Dan Ashworth, who as Football Association technical director was on the panel that appointed Southgate to the England
