◆ The NATO military alliance said yesterday it would launch a Baltic Sea monitoring mission following the suspected sabotage of undersea cables in recent months. Several telecom and power cables have been severed with experts and politicians accusing Russia of orchestrating a hybrid war against the West as the two sides square off over Ukraine. The "Baltic Sentry" mission would involve "frigates and maritime patrol aircraft" among other assets, NATO chief Mark Rutte said at a regional meeting in Finland's capital Helsinki on Tuesday. But he declined to give details on the number of vessels "because that might differ from one week to another" and he did not want to make "the enemy any wiser than he or she is already". NATO was also tight-lipped on the duration, saying in a statement the operation would continue "for an undisclosed amount of time".

Global road transport emissions to peak

AFP | Berlin, Germany

02 emissions from road transport could peak worldwide this year thanks to rapid growth in electric vehicles and stricter new regulations, a German think tank said yesterday.

The International Council on Clean Transportation (ICCT) estimated that vehicle emissions would top out at around nine gigatonnes in 2025, a quarter-century earlier than previously predicted.

The Punch dethroned the Maruti Suzuki WagonR, which held the position for years. Tata sold 2,02,030 units of the Punch, while 1,90,855 units of the WagonR were sold. The Maruti Ertiga ranked third with 1,90,091 units sold, followed by the Brezza and Hyundai Creta with 1,88,160 and 1,86,919 units, respectively.

Passenger vehicle sales in India reached 33.49 lakh units in 2018, when Maruti Suzuki held a dominant 52% market share, and all five top-selling models were from the automaker.

By 2024, passenger vehicle sales grew to 42.86 lakh units, but Maruti's market share slipped to 41%. Additionally, three of the top five best-sellers were SUVs, highlighting a significant shift in consumer preferences.

 $B_{\rm will}^{\rm MW \ has}$ announced it discontinue the iDrive rotary knob, which debuted 24 years ago in the 2001 BMW 7-Series and became a standard feature across all models.

The rotary knob has already been removed from certain models, like the X2. and replaced with touchscreen controls. With the introduction of BMW's new Panoramic iDrive system, the knob will be phased out across all models.

Joern Freyer, Head of User Interaction at BMW, explained that the decision was based on data showing customers increasingly preferred touchscreen controls in recent versions of iDrive, leading to minimal use of the rotary knob. This shift meant BMW no longer needed to design software to accommodate two different control systems.

In an interview, Toshihiro Suzuki, President of Suzuki Motor Corporation, stated, "We cannot share details, but we believe it's important to bring supersport motorcycles to the market, adapting to new regulations... It's part of Suzuki's heritage."

While the exact model remains unclear, speculation points to the potential return of the GSX-R600 and/or GSX-R750.

Vietnam offers rewards for traffic violation evidence to boost road safety

TDT | agencies

Vietnam has reportedly announced a new initiative to reward citizens and organizations with up to VND 5 million (approx. $200) for providing evidence of traffic violations.

Under the scheme, traffic police will share a percentage of the fines collected with civilians who submit camera footage of traffic offenders. Launched this month, the program aims to enhance road safety by encouraging public participation.

Officials stated that the additional revenue generated will fund road safety improvements, including purchasing vehicles and equipment, upgrading information systems, and maintaining traffic databases. Vietnam also plans to implement other safety measures, such as installing surveillance cameras, increasing fines, and enforcing stricter penalties for violators.

Medvedev was playing his first match since the ATP Finals in November after arriving in Australia late to be at home for the birth of his second child.

He pledged before the tournament to be a "disruptor" against the big names this season, but his stuttering start against a player with no pedigree showed he has his work cut out.

"In general it was kind of a top level from him, serving good, one break each set, just what you need to do to win matches," Medvedev, who lost last year's final to Jannik Sinner, said.
