Dubai airport boss warns tough year ahead after 2020 passenger numbers slide 70%

Reuters | Dubai

Dubai Airports' chief executive warned yesterday it would be another tough year for the Middle East's busiest hub, Dubai International, after passenger numbers slid 70% in 2020.

The airport, the base for airline Emirates and a major source of income for Dubai, handled 25.9 million passengers last year, mostly in the first quarter before the COVID-19 pandemic struck.

"We are planning for it to be a tough year. That's undoubtedly the case ... anyone that doesn't think it's going to be a tough year has clearly not being observing what's been going on," chief executive Paul Griffiths told Reuters.

The number of flights handled in 2020 fell 51.4% to 183,993 while the amount of cargo dropped 23.2% to 1.9 million tonnes.

The population in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) states The population in the Guil Cooperation Council declined by about 4% last year due to an exodus of expatriates after the coronavirus crisis and lower oil prices, S&P Global Ratings said in a report yesterday.

"We expect the proportion of foreigners in the region will continue to decline through 2023 relative to the national population, because of subdued non-oil sector growth and workforce nationalisation policies," S&P said.

The overall GCC population is unlikely to return to 2019 levels of 57.6 million people until 2023, S&P said.

"These changes could have repercussions for the regional economy and pose additional challenges to diversifying away from its heavy reliance on the hydrocarbon sector in the long run, if not met with economic and social reforms that foster human capital," it said.

S&P estimated the sharpest population decline last year occurred in Dubai, the Middle East business hub, where the impact of the pandemic on key employment sectors like aviation, tourism and retail led to an 8.4% population decline.

In Oman, where the government has in recent weeks intensified a long-standing policy, known as Omanisation, to create employment for its citizens, the expat population declined by about 12% last year, the agency said.

The region's largest economy, Saudi Arabia, saw its population shrink by 2.8% last year, and S&P estimates a growth of

"I'm happy to be in the quarter-finals today -- that means a lot to me, it's positive stuff," said Federer on 20 Grand Slam men's singles titles.

Next up for Nadal is world number six Tsitsipas, who went through on a walkover after Italy's Matteo Berrettini pulled out with an abdominal strain.
