Jennifer Lawrence plans to take acting 'break' after giving birth

IAN S | Los Angeles

Hollywood star Jennifer Lawrence is going to be a first-time mom soon and seemingly wants to spend more time with her family once she has her baby.

The actress portraying Kate Dibiasky in 'Don't Look Up' is reportedly planning to take a "break" from acting after giving birth, reports aceshowbiz.com.

A source close to Lawrence revealed to HollywoodLife.com that the 31-year-old Oscar-winning actress has a year-long hiatus planned from the big screen after her baby is born. "As for Jen's career, she has really enjoyed having this break and focusing on herself and her pregnancy," the source told the outlet.

"She has worked hard for several years, and it has been very rewarding for her," the so-called inside source continued.

The informant further shared: "She is going to get back to acting but not for a year after the baby is born."

Despite the fact that the Academy Award winner is preparing to take a sabbatical, she is already planning her next big project.

"She has been reading a lot of scripts and wants to take a role next that shows her versatility as an actress.

She knows that she can do it all and plans on maintaining a healthy balance between work and being a mother and wife," the insider shared.

Leonardo DiCaprio: I've looked for a film with environmental undertones

IAN S | Los Angeles

Hollywood actor and environmentalist Leonardo DiCaprio, who is gearing up for the release of his upcoming film 'Don't Look Up', says he often in his career looked for a film that had an environmental undertone to it.

Talking about the movie, Leonardo said, "I've often in my career looked for a film that had an environmental undertone to it and what Adam did was so brilliant, using the analogy of a giant comet heading towards Earth and showing how the human race would react to it from a political and scientific level, through dark comedy," which I had never seen before."

He added: "It was a once in a lifetime opportunity in a lot of ways. I'm a huge fan of a lot of these films that came from the '60s and '70s - 'The Parallax View', 'Three Days of the Condor', certainly 'Network' and, of course, 'Dr. Strangelove', which talked about the Cold War

He said: "I must've had 100 conversations with her. I've spoken to many climate scientists, but our discussions were taken from the viewpoint of an astronomer. It was amazing to see the parallels in their thinking."

Jessica Alba: I didn't enjoy being an actress when I was younger

IAN S | Los Angeles

Actress Jessica Alba, who landed her first film role in 'Camp Nowhere' in 1994 when she was just 13, didn't have "fun" as an actress when she was younger, because she was "wildly insecure" about her abilities and didn't feel "worthy" of attention.

She said: "(I was) so wildly insecure about my abilities as an actress. I felt so judged. I was my worst critic. I think I didn't feel worthy."

The actress shared that she was left "paralyzed with fear" during the early stages of her career, and said she "never had a real liberating, fun experience" while shooting some of her earlier films, reports femalefirst.co.uk.

Speaking about her co-stars, she added: "I just admired people who just were swaggy on set. It felt like they were just in the zone, and you could tell when someone is in the zone and when they just feel good."

Benedict Cumberbatch, Elizabeth Olsen team up for 'Doctor Strange in the Multiverse of Madness' teaser

ANI | Washington

The first teaser for 'Doctor Strange in the Multiverse of Madness' has been officially released today after first being shown as the post-credits scene of 'Spider-Man: No Way Home'.

After the events of 'No Way Home', 'Loki' and 'WandaVision', the structural integrity of the multiverse has taken a beating. This next adventure in the Marvel Cinematic Universe shows Doctor Strange and Wanda Maximoff team up as monsters and villains from the multiverse spill over into the world.

The almost 2-minute long teaser for the upcoming movie suggests that the multiverse's condition could be the reason why an evil, alternate version of Doctor Strange, who originally appeared in the animated Disney Plus series 'What If...?', has crossed over to wreak havoc in the main MCU timeline.

In addition to everything new in the trailer, there are the mind-bending landscapes that made the original Doctor Strange so visually arresting and characters like America Chavez and a giant eyeball monster, based on the comic-book villains Shuma-Gorath and Gargantos.

In addition to Benedict Cumberbatch and Elizabeth

Olsen reprising their roles as Doctor Strange and Wanda, other returning stars include Benedict Wong as Wong, Rachel McAdams as Dr Christine Palmer and Chiwetel Ejiofor as Karl Mordo.

As per Variety, Xochitl Gomez will debut as the young hero America Chavez, who has the power to punch holes into different realities, which will surely come in handy.

Sam Raimi took over from original 'Doctor Strange' director Scott Derrickson, who stepped down from the film due to creative differences.

Raimi is already known in the superhero world for directing the Tobey Maguire 'Spider-Man' trilogy for Sony in the 2000s. 'Loki' writer Michael Waldron and Jade Halley Bartlett wrote the script.

After being delayed a full year, "Doctor Strange in the Multiverse of Madness" is coming to theatres on May 6, 2022.
