TDT | Manama

A construction compa-ny has been ordered to settle BD396,000 in unpaid fees for electrical works delivered as part of a hotel project worth BD2 million.

The Fifth High Commercial Court ruled in favour of the contractor after evidence showed the defendant failed to fully pay for the services, lawyer Fatima Mohammed Al Keraan confirmed.

Al Keraan explained that her client, the plaintiff, signed a contract with the company to carry out electrical work for the hotel project, valued at BD 2,025,000.

The plaintiff completed the work, obtaining a completion certificate from the supervising engineer. While part of the payment was made, a substantial amount remained unpaid despite reminders.

n international gather-Aing on restorative criminal justice has drawn to a close in Bahrain, shining a light on the country's growing influence in modern justice practices.

Over two days, experts and officials from across the globe met at the Gulf Hotel to share experiences and explore approaches to reform.

The event, titled "Promoting Restorative Criminal Justice - An Insight into the Evolution of Criminal Justice Administration Patterns", was organised by the Public Prosecution in partnership with the Ministry of Interior, Naif Arab University for Security Sciences, and the Institute of Judicial and Legal Studies.

Representatives from the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime also took part.

Leader

Bahrain's role as a leader in restorative justice was a central theme.

Discussions covered the implementation of the Restorative Justice for Children Law, the development of criminal mediation programmes, and the use of orders for minor offences to reduce the burden on traditional courts.

These efforts were held up as a practical model that could influence approaches in other countries.

Experts stressed the need for collaboration and the sharing of knowledge between countries to meet the growing challenges facing justice systems.

Legal frameworks

Delegates urged governments to revisit and update their legal frameworks, ensuring they include more opportunities for restorative measures and reflect the best global practices. The conference ended with a series of recommendations aimed at strengthening restorative justice systems.

LEGAL VIEWPOINT

Family companies & organizational disciplinary measures

he important role of family companies in the economy, their structure and legal framework, their culture, the L difficulties they face ... all these related important issues may come up every now and then in family companies.

An important question has been raised to me by some interested groups and some of the executives in companies classified as family companies. The question is related to the organizational and disciplinary structure of family companies. Are they needed? Are there any guidelines or examples to be followed and implemented?

To begin with, we flatly say for the success of any organization, particularly business organizations, the organizational structure and the availability of discipline is a necessity and should be maintained all through the span period of the entity. Needless to say, that failure to accommodate or observe this issue could lead to unexpected results and or failures.

It has been easily noticed, in many cases that there is linkage or mixture between the blood or brotherhood relationship and the business relationship. The big boss brother at home wants, also, to be the big boss brother at work. The son is the son and the daughter is the daughter.... This set of minds, could end up in many difficulties or obstacles for the welfare and future of the business. There should always be a room, if we could say, for two hats one for the business and the second for other relationships and kinships.

Maintaining organizational discipline in a family business can be extremely challenging because the family relationships can distort business roles and objectives.

Which hat to wear could be difficult to follow or to remember by some of the family members. This requires a non-individualistic approach, or in other words a policy stand or organizational structure to be adopted by the company and to be strictly followed by all concerned.

The family members, to safeguard their interests, are required to follow certain discipline in relation to the business. Sometimes it could be very hard to reprimand a relative or senior member in the family. However, the situation could be different in case there is certain policy procedure or established regulation to be followed under all circumstances.

The senior members are supposed to lead and give a good example to all family members under all occasions during good days or difficult days. There are many good examples and also there are many bad examples and both ways got their direct impact on the business and future role of the company.

In the same line, many concerned asked or raised the issue of, for example, how to reprimand a member of the family or a relative?

Basically, and as a matter of principle, we say that, such an issue will not be raised if there is organizational discipline structure in place and, also, if there is standard Policy. However, we recommend some points as, putting everything in writing, this to include, among others, procedures, rules, guidelines, directives, all this should be in writing. Job description for everyone, clear duties, responsibilities, delegations.... should be in writing and known by everyone.

Procedures and written guidelines will minimize, to a great extent, internal conflicts between the concerned members. If a family member in the company consistently performs below expectations for any reason whatsoever, the person in charge shall call him and inform about his performance according to the rules and procedures of the company. Direct contact is essential in such circumstances to give fruitful results and sets example to all family members.

Transparency with reference to procedures and rules should be maintained all through. All family members should be informed about performance expectations, possibility of improvements, if any, and a time table for performing them. Transparency requires open policy and processes. This could lead us to say that any actions taken behind closed doors will be viewed with suspicion and unacceptability by other members of the family.

A clear firm stand regarding the compliance of the rules and regular updating of procedures is highly required and should be maintained under all circumstances. Equal treatment in all cases, of compliance or non-compliance, is required.

Another point, that is to say fair treatment should also be followed with other non-family members who should feel justice, fair and non-discriminatory treatment with other family members. Non -family members could be the backbone of the company and discrimination between them and family members could jeopardize the interests of the company. Fairness and clear-cut policies will lead to successful healthy environment in all businesses.

Stars arrive ahead of Bahrain Championship

DP World Tour stars arrive for Bapco Energies Bahrain Championship starting Jan 30

• Royals to attend today's opening ceremony

TDT | Manama

nticipation is rising in the Kingdom as the stars of the DP World Tour arrived in Bahrain yesterday to kickstart preparations for the highly anticipated Bapco Energies Bahrain Championship, scheduled to take place from Thursday, January 30 to Sunday, February 2 at the iconic Royal Golf Club.

The excitement begins today with a spectacular official opening ceremony, which will feature royal attendance. Following the resounding success of last year's curtain-raising showcase, organisers have set out to ensure another unforgettable experience that reflects Bahrain's growing reputation as a global sports destination while celebrating its rich cultural heritage.

Star-studded field

from across the globe includ-Frittelli of South Africa, and Major winners Padraig Harrington, Jimmy Walker and Patrick Reed.

Fans can also look forward to seeing Alejandro Del Rey, fresh off his victory at the Ras Al Khaimah Championship, and a host of other Ryder Cup stars and DP World Tour winners.
