Israel's 'horrifying' strike in Gaza leaves 100 dead

AFP | Gaza City

An Israeli air strike on a Single residential block killed nearly 100 people yesterday, Gaza's civil defence agency said, leaving rescuers scrambling for survivors as Israel pursued its offensives in Gaza and Lebanon.

Israel's key ally and backer the US called the strike which killed a large number of children - "horrifying".

The bombing came with Israel facing an international backlash after its parliament voted overwhelmingly to ban UNRWA, the main United Nations aid agency working with Palestinians in Gaza and the occupied West Bank.

Palestinian rescuers and desperate family members gathered around the demolished five-storey block in Beit Lahia in northern Gaza.

A charred body with long hair hung from an upper-storey window and bodies in blankets were lined up in the street as stunned relatives sought to identify loved ones.

Push for 35-year housing loan repayments

A positive step amid rising cost of living in Bahrain

TDT | Manama

Homeowners may get a 10-year breather under a Parliament-backed call to extend housing loan repayments to 35 years - an overdue lifeline for low-income families grappling with rising living costs.

The proposal, which received Parliament's approval yesterday, includes the 'Mazaya' scheme, extending repayment options for beneficiaries.

MPs argued that the rising cost of living is particularly harsh for low-income citizens, who struggle under the weight of monthly instalments taken directly from their earnings.

With instalments set to rise every two years, many beneficiaries could find it increasingly difficult to keep up with payments.

Amendment

The proposal, introduced by MPs Bader Al Tamimi, Ahmed Qaratah, Mohammed Al Balushi, Waleed Al Doseri, and Jaleela Al Sayed, seeks to amend Decision No. 909 of 2015.

The suggested changes would introduce a flexible payment scheme tailored to each beneficiary's income and situation, allowing for repayment periods exceeding 25 years.

MPs believe this step would ease the strain on low-income citizens, enabling them to access housing services without the heavy financial burdens they currently endure."

Parliament vote unanimously to impose tougher penalties for 'tech theft'

Mohammed Darwish TDT | Manama

arliament voted unanimously yesterday to impose tougher penalties for tech theft, introducing up to two years in prison or BD500 in fines for stealing phones and laptops.

According to the proposal, if a thief intends to sift through the data on these devices, they could face both prison time and

This new law, backed by the Foreign Affairs, Defence, and National Security Committee, imposes stronger penalties for theft aimed at accessing personal data, mandating a minimum of three months in jail for thefts involving digital devices.

The law updates parts of the 1976 Penal Code to protect modern gadgets, acknowledging the growing risks associated with the misuse of personal and financial information stored on them.

Serious threat

"Modern devices hold large amounts of personal information," said MP Abdullah Al Rumaihi, the committee's former a serious threat to privacy and safety, necessitating a robust ident." legal framework to tackle the severity of this crime."

The proposal stresses the necessity of keeping laws in step with today's digital dangers.

The law stipulates at least three months' imprisonment for stealing phones, laptops, or tablets, escalating to a minimum of one year if the intent was to access personal data.

Sensitive information

MP Ahmed Al Salloom pointed out that while device theft rates in Bahrain are lower than in some other countries, it remains crucial to enforce stricter regulations given the sensitive information often stored on these devices.

Notably, similar laws were enacted across Europe to address these challenges.

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), introduced in 2018, sets stringent standards for data protection and privacy, giving individuals greater control over their personal information.

As Parliament introduces tougher penalties for tech theft, it is crucial that our laws keep pace with technological advancements.

With digital devices commonplace in daily life, effective protections against tech theft are essential for safeguarding personal and financial information.

By implementing these updated penalties, Parliament aims to deter crime and improve public of the digital age.

Stricter rules eyed for mobile phone line sales

Proposed stricter regulations on mobile phone line sales aim to enhance public safety in Bahrain by mandating identification checks for residents and

The initiative, brought forth by Basima Mubarak and co-signed by MPs Mohammed Salman Al Ahmed, And Hanan Al Fardan seeks to tackle the alarming misuse of unidentified SIM cards, often exploited for criminal activities.

This proposal was submitted yesterday to the Council of Representatives and addresses the pressing issue of mobile lines being sold without adequate identification checks.

The proposers emphasise that security and safety are fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution, highlighting the alarming number of unidentified mobile lines being used to conceal identities and evade law enforcement.

The initiative aims to curtail the sale of these unidentified SIM cards, which have reportedly found their way into the hands of individuals with questionable motives. By ensuring that mobile phone lines are sold only to identifiable individuals, the proposers contend that public safety in Bahrain will be significantly enhanced.

While acknowledging the essential role of mobile phone services in daily life almost every household and vehicle relies on them — Mubarak raised concerns about the misuse of these services for personal gain, extortion, and other unlawful activities.

Fund to fix unsafe homes for low-income families

TDT | Manama

Run-down homes for low-in-come families could soon get the repairs they badly need as MPs, led by Hassan Ebrahim, push for a new fund with backing from both the government and banks.

The plan aims to tackle long-ignored problems that have left some families living in unsafe conditions. Ebrahim and MP Khalid Bua-

The proposal was put forward at the Council of Representatives yesterday but was delayed due to a packed sched-

Fair hearing

Supporters hope it will get a fair hearing soon.

"This isn't just about fixing houses," said Ebrahim. "It's about giving families a sense of safety and peace that they've been missing for too long."

The fund would focus on finishing off old repair jobs left undone and setting up new checks to spot homes in urgent need of work.

"This isn't just about fixing houses. It's about giving families a sense of safety and peace that they've been missing for too long.

- MP HASSAN EBRAHIM

The main aim of the fund is to deal with pressing safety issues, like weak structures, to keep families safe from the risks that come with poor living conditions.

The Ministry of Municipalities and Agriculture will work closely with local councils to find homes at risk, while banks joining in will chip in each year as part of their duty to the com-

Constitution

The proposal is rooted in Bahrain's Constitution, which says, "The State shall work to provide housing for citizens with limited income."

It also points out that family is the backbone of society, pressing the country to look after and support families.

This plan builds on that duty, making clear that the state has a duty to stand by these values for its people.

'I'm not a Nazi,' Trump insists as Harris blasts ugly rhetoric

Former US president Donald Trump speaks at a campaign rally in Atlanta, Georgia

AFP | Washington

Donald Trump told supporters Monday he is "not a Nazi," using a rally in the final week of a bitter White House race to refute accusations of authoritarianism, including from a former top aide who branded him a fascist.

As he and rival Kamala Harris, the current vice president, entered the final stretch of one of the closest US elections in modern times, each candidate and their teams have ramped up the political rhetoric, inflaming an already tense campaign. Democrat Harris, who has accused Trump of stoking divisions, crisscrossed Michigan on Monday while the Republican visited Georgia, another of the decisive swing states, where he said critics are accusing him of being a modern-day

"Hitler." "The newest line from Kamala and her campaign is that everyone who isn't voting for her is a Nazi," Trump told a boisterous rally in Atlanta.

"I'm not a Nazi. I'm the opposite of a Nazi."

The comments come a day after Trump held a major rally in New York's famed Madison Square Garden that was widely condemned for racist remarks his allies made during the event.

They also follow the recent publication of a New York Times interview in which Trump's longest-serving White House chief of staff, retired general John Kelly, said the Republican fits the definition of a fascist -- something Harris said she agreed with last

Kelly also said Trump had remarked that "Hitler did some good things too" and that he "wanted generals like Adolf Hitler had."

Tensions are soaring in a race polls suggest is too close to call, fueled by fears that former president Trump could again refuse to recognize a defeat, as in 2020, and by his harsh rhetoric threatening migrants and political opponents.

On Monday, a fire reportedly consumed hundreds of early ballots cast in a supposedly secure drop-off box in a competitive district in northwestern Washington
