Unity Strengthened

MP Al-Dhaen highlights national identity and security as pillars of Bahrain's sustainable growth

TDT| Manama

National identity and security form the backbone of sustainable development in Bahrain, MP Dr. Maryam Al Dhaen said yesterday while highlighting the significance of the discussion H.H. General Shaikh Rashid bin Abdullah Al Khalifa, the Minister of Interior, had with the residents of the Southern Governorate.

The meeting, in which the minister reaffirmed the Kingdom's commitment to address citizens' needs and priorities, shows the dedication of the minister in enhancing the Bahraini identity, the MP said.

"Security strengthens our sense of belonging and pride in our national identity," the MP stated.

Stern warning against vehicle decals, stickers

TDT | Manama

The General Directorate of Traffic at the Ministry of the Interior has issued a stern warning against placing stickers, advertisements, logos, or any writings on vehicles, emphasising that such actions constitute traffic violations.

The warning, issued via the Directorate's official social media channels, was published in Arabic, English, and Urdu.

The warning encompasses a wide range of items, including company advertisements and logos, contact numbers, promotional materials, children's stickers, drawings, and other similar items.

The Directorate's statement cites Article 21 of the Traffic Law of 1979, which mandates that registered vehicle owners must notify the General Directorate of Traffic of any significant changes to the vehicle's essential parts.

The statement clarifies that the vehicle's body is considered a crucial part, and any alteration, including the addition of stickers, constitutes a significant change requiring approval from the relevant authorities.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Growing Crisis of Abandoned Cats

am writing to bring attention to a deeply concerning issue that has seen a dramatic increase in recent years - the abandonment of cats in Bahrain. Since 2020, a significant number of domestic cats have been left to fend for themselves, often in areas with dangerous feral dog packs, putting their lives at risk. It's distressing to witness such a rise in neglect, particularly when these cats are clearly unprepared for the harsh realities of outdoor life. The sight of matted fur and malnourished cats has sadly become more frequent in our neighbourhoods, leaving citizens and animal advocates scrambling to provide care and rehoming.

A key factor appears to be a lack of education. Many pet owners seem to mistakenly believe that house cats can adapt to outdoor survival, and this misconception leads to more cats being abandoned once they are no longer wanted. Additionally, there is a growing trend of people adopting pets during their stay in Bahrain, only to discard them when leaving the country or when the novelty wears off.

Animal rescue organizations are struggling to keep up. Despite their tireless efforts to rescue, treat, and rehome these animals, many of these organizations are underfunded and overwhelmed. Just recently, a rescue organization nearly faced bankruptcy. While individuals and volunteers do their best to help, with some feeding and rehoming multiple dumped cats, the problem is far too widespread for small-scale efforts to be a long-term solution.

This issue calls for immediate action. A public awareness campaign is urgently needed to educate the community on responsible pet ownership, particularly regarding the importance of spaying and neutering pets to prevent overpopulation. Furthermore, more funding should be allocated to catch-neuter-release programs, which have proven effective in reducing the stray population.

We cannot allow this crisis to escalate. It is our collective responsibility to ensure that abandoned animals are not left to suffer on the streets. With coordinated efforts from the government, animal welfare organizations, and the public, we can begin to address this growing problem and create a more humane future for all animals in Bahrain.

Tale of Tailgaters and Flashaholics

I've got a bone to pick with a certain breed of driver roaming Bahrain's highways, that is the majestic 'flashaholic' and their trusty sidekick, the 'tailgating terror'. You know the type. They're the ones who think the left lane is their personal racetrack, and their headlights are magic wands meant to banish you from the road.

These drivers seem to forget a tiny detail, that the left lane is for overtaking, not auditioning for a Fast & Furious sequel. But here I am, cruising at the speed limit like a responsible citizen, when suddenly my rearview mirror lights up like a disco. Flash, flash, FLASH! Clearly, they believe that by blinding me, I'll either develop the ability to fly or will vanish into the Bermuda Triangle. Truth is that neither happens.

And let's talk about tailgating. It's like these drivers have separation anxiety, but for cars. They get so close that I can practically see their Spotify playlist through the windshield. Here's a fun fact, fellow drivers - Being this close won't make me move faster. It'll only make my heart rate go up, and not in a good way.

Now, the attitude behind all this is the real kicker. It's as if these drivers have convinced themselves that they were personally handed the keys to the Kingdom of Bahrain's roads. Their motto? "Move, peasant, I have places to be!" I get it, maybe they're late to an appointment or, more likely, late to understanding basic road rules.

But seriously, let's rein it in, folks. Traffic authorities should definitely crack down on these flashy, tailgating habits. Maybe we could even hand out medals for good behaviour. 'Best at Not Blinding Fellow Drivers' has a nice ring to it.

So, let's make Bahrain's roads a little less 'Mario Kart' and a bit more, you know, normal. Flashers and tailgaters, I beg of you, calm down. The rest of us would like to arrive at our destination with both our sanity and our bumpers intact.

Master's Degree and Experience: New requirements for expat workers in Bahrain's public sector

The new law approved today in the parliament, sets strict hiring criteria for expatriates, requiring them to hold a master's degree, possess at least ten years of experience, and limits their contracts to just two years—renewable once with Civil Service Bureau approval.

Expat hires must also train Bahraini staff to take over their roles, ensuring knowledge transfer and empowering locals for key positions.

Nothing wrong to back their own citizen.... It's their own country and their people are priority and nothing wrong in this. No country will like expats working in public sectors and citizens not getting jobs.

VIRAL NEWS ability to elude capture is finally off ONLINE the streets

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dubbed on social media as the "Houdini" of New Orleans' Mid-City neighborhood, Scrim — a scruffy, mixed-breed dog that was on the lam for more than six months after escaping his yard — has finally been caught.

The 13-pound (about six-kilogram) runaway was captured Wednesday night with the use of a tranquilizer dart. New Orleans news outlets report that he is missing a chunk out of his ear and has various abrasions. Also, X-rays revealed two projectiles — possibly small bullets or air rifle pellets — were lodged inside his little body.

Veterinarian Dr. Mary Miller told The Times-Picayune/The New Orleans Advocate she couldn't be positive what type of weapon had been used, since she decided to leave the projectiles embedded in the dog's flesh. "We're probably not going to remove them," Miller said, "because they're not going to cause an issue."

Despite his injuries, Miller said, Scrim's condition "wasn't awful." Michelle Cheramie, owner of the non-profit Zeus Rescues in New Orleans, said she had rescued Scrim from a south Louisiana dog pound where he was in jeopardy of euthanasia. Scrim was eventually adopted by a family in Mid-City, but soon escaped.

He soon became the talk of the neighborhood, and a bit of a star on social media where people posted videos from cellphones and security cameras whenever he was spotted. He managed to elude traps and would-be captors with nets and tranquilizer guns until Wednesday.

Finally, Cheramie got a call that Scrim had been sighted. She grabbed her tranquilizer gun and a group of volunteers showed up at the scene.

"WE GOT HIM!!!!" Cheramie posted on social media Wednesday night. Once he's fully healthy, he will be adopted again. Tammy Murray, co-founder of the nonprofit New Orleans Animal Welfare Society, told the newspaper she plans to take him in.
